20 Course Description:

This course offers an in-depth exploration of morphological structures in various languages, emphasizing the principles and methodologies of contrastive linguistics. The course is designed to equip students with advanced skills in analyzing and comparing morphological systems, shedding light on the diverse ways languages encode meaning through word formation processes. Through a combination of theoretical discussions, practical exercises, and hands-on research projects, students will gain a nuanced understanding of the role of morphology in linguistic diversity.

21 Course aims and outcomes:

A- Aims: Program learning out comes (PLO`s)

Upon successful completion of the Master's Program in Linguistics, students should be able to:

1. Discuss and Evaluate current linguistic theories, research methods, and their applications in professional contexts in a way that reflects his deep understanding of language structure and discourse.
2. Compare and contrast language systems, including grammar, phonetics, phonology, morphology, syntax, Semantics, pragmatics, and language acquisition in a manner that demonstrates comprehensive understanding of linguistic diversity.
3. Apply computational tools efficiently in linguistic research, lexicography, and language teaching, effectively harnessing technology to support language analysis and processing.
4. Systematize, critically analyze, and interpret extensive linguistic data from corpora, demonstrating the ability to extract valuable insights from linguistic sources.
5. Synthesize and analyze linguistic theory and data, using this knowledge to construct well-structured and evidence-based scholarly arguments.
6. Design and conduct linguistic research, interpreting its results, demonstrating the ability to write a master's thesis proficiently, and producing reports of publishable quality.

7. Prepare and deliver professional and specialized seminars, and work efficiently both independently and collaboratively while upholding social and professional responsibilities.
8. Demonstrates proficiency in using information and communication technology, employing it to generate new knowledge and enhance intellectual and professional capabilities and skills.

B- Course Learning Outcomes (CLOs):

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

Category	Scoring Criteria	Points	Score
Organization (2 points)	Information is presented in a logical sequence.	1
	Presentation appropriately cites requisite number of references.	1
Content (3 points)	Introduction is attention-getting, lays out the topic well, and establishes a framework for the rest of the presentation.	1
	Technical terms are well-defined in language appropriate for the target audience.	1
	There is an obvious conclusion summarizing the presentation.	1
Presentation (5 points)	Speaker uses a clear and audible voice.	1
	Delivery is poised, controlled, and smooth.	1
	Good language skills and pronunciation are used.	1
	Body language and eye contact	1
	Length of presentation is within the assigned time limits.	1
